Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Memorials to Roosevelt: A Book of Suggestions The Roosevelt Memorial (A Plea for Beauty) How shall we spread like wings across the land The shadow of your gracious memory, Which is not shadow indeed, but morning cloud, Shot through with radiance of the coming day? How shall we send that flame upon its way, That through the changes of the time to be All men may understand? How shall we grave your dear immortal name So high on all the doorways of the world That every heart in all the passing throng Shall tremble with the impulse of a song? We shall not let you die! Your word shall be Re-vitalized beyond forgetfulness; Gifted anew with power to bless, Year after year the same. Your heart was greater than its best desire; And all the hearts of men were warmed to life By that unfailling fire. Knight and crusader every day and hour, What shall make clear the sources of your power? What cunningly fair memorial shall we bring To make your memory sing, Your thought to rise and flower with every Spring? There is one warder by the gates of time, One bloom, that knows an immemorial prime. Good gifts shall fall away, And noblest uses reach their final day; No knowledge we may teach shall stand forever.
